PRELIMINARY ARRANGEMENTS

For the Democratic National Convention.

RAPIDLY NEARING FINISHING TOUCHES

Convention Hall at St. Louis Lavishly Decorated.

ONLY THOMAS JEFFERSON'S PORTRAIT WILL BE SEEN

Predictions Are That It Will Be the Most Notable Democratic Gathering of Recent Years—All Great Leaders of the Party Will Be Present John Sharp Williams Mentioned for Temporary Chairman

St Louis June 30—More than one orator at the recent Republican national convention at Chicago felt called upon to apologize for the apparent lack of interest there More than one explanation was made that required a contest to create enthusiasm

There will be no need for any such apology or explanation when the representatives of the Democratic party in the United States assemble in St Louis next week for the purpose of naming their national candidates and preparing the platform upon which they will appeal to the country

All indications are that the coming Democratic convention will be one of the most interesting political gatherings of recent years All the great leaders will be present There will be nothing "cut and dried" about it The delegates themselves will decide what they want to do And it is because the delegates are yet uncertain as to their course because there are so many possibilities in the situation, and because of the vast interests involved, that each day's session of the convention will present a scene of feverish excitement and wild acclaim which will make it memorable in history

With five or six presidential candidates already in the field and several dark horses' being diligently trained to be entered as "added starters" at the last moment, the prospects for a lively and spectacular contest are great No one now here expects the convention to be concluded in three days It may run for a week But while it lasts there will be ample opportunity for the enthusiasts to enthuse and for the leather-lunged patriot to shout himself hoarse in behalf of his country, his party and his candidate

The setting for the big event has been well chosen and every preliminary has been arranged The convention will be held in the great hall of the Coliseum which is situated in the heart of the city of St Louis and is conveniently reached by several lines of street cars The big hotels are within easy distance The decorators have already taken the hall in hand and expect to have completed their work this week C W Martin the head of the Missouri Tent & Awning company of this city, who has the contract in charge, promises to make the hall a bower of beauty If the profusion of flags and green stuff can [illegible] that there is no doubt that he will fulfill his promise, for of them he has [illegible]

At Chicago the most prominent feature of the decorations was a large picture of the late Senator Hanna Because of the pre eminent part he had taken in the formulation of the Republican policies in recent years, that was appropriate enough But at St Louis the central figure will be a large picture of Thomas Jefferson Republicans [illegible] that that is another indication that the Democratic party is living in the past But to Democrats—and this is to be a Democratic convention the contrast will have another significance

There will be no pictures of the only living Democratic ex-president, Mr Cleveland nor of any of the candidates for the presidential nomination in the [illegible] In this respect the decorations [illegible] partisan

The hall itself is oval in shape and [illegible] substantial structure Great steel [illegible] support the roof which is [illegible] so as to afford the greatest [illegible] properties A tier of seats [illegible] from the floor of the hall extends [illegible] each side and a gallery up [illegible] the roof increases the accommodations for visitors There are [illegible] provided for 10 500 persons in the [illegible] Three thousand of these are on the floor itself still leaving ample aisle room

In the arrangement of these seats a new idea has been carried into effect by Sergeant at Arms John I Martin of St Louis who has officiated in a similar capacity in the last three Democratic conventions, and who is the presiding genius in charge of every detail here Colonel Martin is making an effort to have this convention so perfectly arranged that it will be a model for all future assemblies of the kind, and he is quite liable to "make good"

The speakers' platform is in the center of the north side of the hall one of the long curves of the oval It is raised about five feet from the floor

Back of the platform is a tier of seats for the members of the national committee and distinguished guests A row of boxes extends all the way around the hall like those in Madison Square garden New York, at the horse show and these too, will be reserved for distinguished people

Immediately to the right and left of the platform are the desks for the working newspapermen—those representing daily newspapers whose reports must be dashed off at once to the telegraph wire These desks number 176 on each side Just back of them are ruled off sections containing 60 chairs on each side for the use of the representatives of the weekly papers and the magazines Altogether there will be over 700 seats on the floor reserved for the press

Stairways in front of the correspondents and by the side of the platform lead down directly to the telegraph offices of the Western Union on one side and the Postal Telegraph company on the other, so that copy may be rushed to the wires without delay

Back of the correspondents on each side—and here is where the new idea comes in—are the seats for the alternate Heretofore in all national conventions the alternates have been stretched in long lines from end to end of the hall back of the delegates

The delegates themselves, in a wide-pointed wedge formation will occupy the exact center of the floor, stretching from directly in front of the speakers' platform to the rear of the hall They will be seated on each side of a wide aisle leading straight to the platform and there will be an aisle on each side of them, so that a delegate who is called to the platform to speak, or who desires to send a telegraph message, can do so without disturbing his colleagues

The drawing of seats for the delegations, which is done by a blind fold ed boy who draws the name of each state from a box previously well-shaken will occur in a day or two in the office of the sergeant at arms The first names out of the box get the front seats, and the lottery frequently has peculiar results Just how it will turn out this year will not be made known until the day before the convention, when the standards bearing the name of each state, will be placed in position

These standards by the way, will be fastened securely to the floor so that delegates in a moment of enthusiasm may not snatch them up and bear

THE FAITHFUL MEET DOWIE

IN "PONTIFICAL ROBES" HE BLESSES HIS PEOPLE

He Arrives in Chicago Where Crowds of Bewhiskered Men and Ascetic Faced Women Besiege the Car with Enthusiastic Greeting

Chicago June 30—John Alexander Dowie, general overseer of the Christian Catholic church, arrived in Chicago at 7 49, this morning, accompanied by members of his executive staff who met him at Cleveland When the car rolled under the station shed, Dowie, his wife Gladstone Dowie the "unkissed" and Miss Ruth Hofen, the millionaire Swiss young woman convert, were at breakfast

Dowie wore pontifical robes," consisting of a suit of white duck and a cap shaped like a cardinal's hat. He scooped out a cantelope with a silver spoon and drank mineral water from a crystal and carved silver mug oblivious of the staring crowd on the depot platform

A waiting engine uncoupled the car and drew it to the Northwestern depot, where it remained for an hour Crowds of bewhiskered men who greeted each other with Peace to thee brother,' and women whose faces bore the look of fervent ascetics, besieged the car and shouted greetings at the Dowie party Dowie appeared at the door and held his hands above the crowd to bless them

At 9 o clock the car was attached to a passenger train and departed for Zion City where ten thousand Dowieites will welcome their leader Near the $60 000 red brick depot erected for the Dowieites is a triumphal arch on which is inscribed the name of the city "Dr Dowie has won" The Zion City band Zion guards 500 strong in uniforms of black and gold and the sisters and children of Zion will welcome Dowie with music songs and military display The modern Elijah addressed his followers and went to his palace-like residence to receive those who may be especially favored with a personal interview.

HE SUFFERS BROKEN NECK

George Fogle Is Instantly Killed in a Runaway Accident.

UNTIL QUITE RECENTLY A RESIDENT OF MARION

He and a Grandson Are Riding on the Coupling Pole of a Wagon When Team Runs Away Mr. Fogle Falls and Is Killed but Grandson Drops Off and Escapes Injury

George Fogle aged [illegible] a resident of Broadway, Union county, was killed in a runaway Saturday morning. Mr. Fogle in company with his [illegible] year old grandson whose name also is George Fogle, were on their way to Marysville. There was no box on the wagon and they were riding upon the coupling pole. Nearing the Union county fairground the horses became frightened and ran away.

Mr. Fogle fell from the wagon, became entangled in the reins and was dragged a short distance when his head was caught by one of the rear wheels and his neck broken.

The grandson crawled along the coupling pole and after releasing his grandparent he swung under the wagon and dropped to the road thus escaping all injury. When assistance came an examination developed that not only was Mr. Fogle's neck broken but his skull was badly crushed.

Mr. Fogle was a resident of Marion for several years and resided on Olney avenue, removing to Broadway about two years ago.

The funeral occurred Sunday afternoon at Marysville.

The Spartan Japanese Father

The Spartan character of the Japanese father may be gathered from two facts mentioned by Consul Daigoro Goh in the admirable address on family relations in Japan which he delivered before the Japan society in London, says London Truth. The Japanese child calls its father Gampu and its mother Jibo, which mean strict father and benevolent mother, and Mr. Goh quoted a Japanese boy who classified the Japanese father as one of the four fearful things of the world: earthquake, thunder, conflagration and father.

NOTES AND NEWS OF COMMON PLEAS

Levi Ruth has filed a petition for divorce from his wife Anna Ruth in the court of common pleas. They were married at Caledonia August 8, 1882, and have three children, Charles, Ida and John, the youngest of which is twelve years of age. The plaintiff charges gross neglect, averring that the defendant left him when their youngest child was but nine months old and from that time has remained away from her family and that at present her whereabouts is unknown. The plaintiff prays for divorce and the custody of the children.

The damage proceedings of Lawrence Stevens, by his next friend, Anna Stevens, against the Marion Light and Power company, assigned for Thursday morning in common pleas court, has been continued until July 12.

In the divorce proceeding of Ellen M. Clark against Zachariah J. Clark in the court of common pleas the defendant has filed a motion that the judgment for alimony in the sum of $1[illegible]0 rendered against him be vacated, alleging that he is ill and unable to pay the sum and that if the court persists in forcing him to make the payment he will become a charge on the county.

In the matter of the B[illegible] company against J. S. Moon the company has filed an amended petition in the court of common pleas in which a claim for $1,8[illegible]2 [illegible] is set forth and judgment in that sum prayed for.

The plaintiff in the matter of Dallas W. Mattix against Sheridan W. Mattix has filed a reply in the court of common pleas in which the allegations contained in the defendant's answer are denied and the plaintiff alleges that he did not receive proper and careful treatment while under the care of the defendant.

ENGINE HITS A HERD OF CATTLE

By Sheer Good Fortune a Serious Wreck Is Averted.

HOCKING VALLEY ENGINE AND A SLEEPER DERAILED

One Cow Is Killed and Several Are Injured Local Switching Engine Clears the Track Nice Excursion Business Out of the City Sunday Railroad Notes

The Hocking Valley crossing at the Evans farm four miles south of the city was the scene of a wreck about 8 o'clock Sunday night. Sheer good fortune averted what might have been a wreck of appalling magnitude. As it was the engine and sleeper were derailed and traffic was delayed for two hours.

No. 12, the Marion train running between Columbus and Marion, carrying the Chicago accommodation coach and sleeper, left Marion on time, 7:4[illegible] p.m. The train hit a herd of cattle on the track. One cow was killed and several injured. The cows belonged to the Evans estate. The local switching engine which was doing some work at Owens came to the assistance of the train. After an hour's work the engine was put back on the track. The sleeper was brought back to Marion and taken out on the early morning train.

The excursion business out of the city Sunday was quite heavy. The Pennsylvania sold twenty six tickets to Cedar Point and thirty to Columbus. The Big Four sold 110 to Cleveland on its excursion, the Hocking seventy five to Columbus and the Erie twenty five to Cincinnati. All of the trains running through the city were taxed to their capacity by excursionists.

THE FRANCIS T. MARION COMPANY ELECTS OFFICERS

Holds the Last Meeting of the Season Last Saturday

The General Francis T. Marion Company, Order of the American Boy, met in its last session of the season Saturday at the Y. M. C. A. building. The next meeting will be held on the first Saturday afternoon after the fall term of school begins.

Officers for the coming year were elected as follows:

Lewis Morrill, captain; Sidney Marks, vice captain; Harry K[illegible], secretary; Eliff Houghton, treasurer.

There was a large attendance at the meeting.

CAN FIND NO ONE WHO KNOWS MR. MARKS

Who Is Taken Ill of Smallpox En Route to New Jersey

Gus Marks, claiming to be en route from Marion to Belleville, New Jersey, was taken off a train at M[illegible], Pennsylvania, afflicted by smallpox last week.

Monday Dr. J. H. Raffensperger, secretary of the local board of health, received a letter from Dr. C. O. Probst, secretary of the state board of health, notifying him of the matter. Dr. Probst says in his letter that Marks left Marion on the evening of June [illegible] and he adds:

"If you know nothing of this case I hope you will look into it at once, as the man may have left infection behind him and there may be other cases of which you know nothing."

The health authorities have been unable to find any person in the city who knows of Marks. His name does not appear in the city directory.

PROHIBITIONISTS WILL EVER STRIVE FAITHFULLY

For the Cause in Which Late D. H. Wonder Took Great Interest

Inasmuch as our brother and fellow worker D. H. Wonder has gone to his reward and has left for us an example of good citizenship, we, the Prohibitionists of Marion county, in business session this the [illegible]th day of June, 1904, do hereby resolve to strive more faithfully than ever before to further the cause in which our dear brother felt such a hearty interest.

We instruct the secretary to present a copy of this expression of love, extending to the family our heartfelt sympathy.

IS ARRESTED AND FINED

Albert Reed Pays Ten Dollars and Costs Into City Treasury.

HITS HIS DAUGHTER WITH A BUGGY WHIP

Taken Into Custody by an Officer Reed States That He Hardly Knew What He Was Doing The Fine Is for Drunkenness and Disorderly Conduct

While on his way to police headquarters Sunday evening to report for duty Officer Fitzell saw a man in a buggy on east Church street slash a little girl three times with a buggy whip. The officer promptly placed the man under arrest and took him to police headquarters where he said his name was Albert Reed, a boilermaker residing on Lincoln avenue. He was fined $10 and costs by Mayor Mader for drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

Reed had been out driving with his wife and thirteen year old daughter. The girl became frightened at the reckless manner in which her father was driving. He became angered and struck her with the whip. At police headquarters Reed said that he did not realize what he was doing or he would not have done it.

CERTIFICATE OF DEATH OF ROCCO EMANUELE

To Be Forwarded to the Widow in Sunny Italy

So that a baby girl might some day be legally married in far away Italy and that the widowed mother of the child may secure the insurance on the life of her dead husband, the Rev. Father Joseph Denning, pastor of St. Mary's church, Sunday placed the seal of the holy church upon a paper officially announcing the death of Rocco Emanuele.

Following is the wording of the paper which means so much to the widow and infant daughter:

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

This is to certify that Rocco Emanuele, son of Carmine and Baddino Pasquelina of Molinara, province of Benevento, Italy, born August 11, 1868, was killed by the cars a few miles from this city June 20, 1904, and was buried in St. Mary's Catholic cemetery, Marion, Ohio, U. S. A.

Besides the holy seal the document was signed by the Rev. Father Denning and Dr. J. H. Raffensperger, clerk of the board of health.

It appears that a daughter in Italy cannot legally marry without the consent of her father and that a document of the above kind must be secured from the officiating priest at the funeral of the father if he dies in a foreign land. It is stated that Emanuele carried sufficient insurance to keep his wife in comfort the remainder of her life in her Italian home.

HE DIES FROM HIS INJURIES

Charles Kishler, Former Marion Boy, Passes Away at Columbus.

THE THIRD VICTIM OF THE DELAWARE WRECK

Pinned Down by the Wreckage He Sends a Message to His Wife "Tell Maggie It's All Right I'm Safe in the Arms of Jesus" The Story of the Wreck

Mr. Charles Kishler, conductor of the ill fated Twentieth Century Limited on the Big Four wrecked at Delaware Sunday, died at 7:45 o'clock Saturday evening in the Protestant hospital at Columbus from his many injuries. He had been horribly scalded about his lower extremities besides having his left foot crushed, his arm broken and his shoulder mashed.

Mr. Kishler was a brother of Mrs. Cortez E. Sargent, No. 615 east Center street, and Mrs. Thomas J. Mason, No. 90[illegible] east Center street, and a nephew of Mrs. Anna M. Frase, No. 121 south Vine street. A sister, Mrs. A. L. Kupp, lives at Toledo and a brother, Mr. S[illegible] Kishler, at Greenville.

The remains were taken to Cleveland for interment. Services were held at his late residence Tuesday afternoon at 2:3[illegible] o'clock.

Charles Kishler was born and raised in Marion but had not lived here for a score of years. His boyhood chums recall the fact that when a boy Mr. Kishler always said that he would some day be a conductor on a railroad. That seemed to be his greatest ambition. Of late years he took much interest in church work. Since his conversion he established a reputation as a religious worker in the slums of Cleveland and Columbus, having resided in the Capital City until recently. While yet in the wreckage he said to the rescuing party:

"Tell Maggie it's all right. I'm safe in the arms of Jesus." Maggie was his wife. A few hours later he expired.

Mr. Kishler was forty eight years old and leaves a wife and six children, three of the children being by a former wife. He was regarded as one of the most careful conductors on the line.

When the wreck occurred Mr. and Mrs. Cortez E. Sargent were returning home from the exposition at St. Louis. At Upper Sandusky a traveling man bought a Columbus newspaper which contained an account of the wreck. He incidentally mentioned that the conductor had been fatally injured. Mr. Sargent tried to keep the name of the injured conductor from his wife but his efforts were futile.

When the train reached Marion Mrs. Sargent was taken home in a cab and Mr. Sargent continued his way to Delaware where he supposed he would find his brother in law. At the Evans crossing four miles south of the city the train ran into a herd of cattle. The engine was derailed. Mr. Sargent occupied the first car which was not derailed, but the one back of it was. No one was hurt. It was 3 o'clock Sunday morning before Mr. Sargent reached Columbus and it was then too late to see his brother in law, whose body had been shipped to Cleveland a short time before his arrival.

Bert Shephard and Richard Neil, engineer and baggageman, both of Cleveland, the other dead, were well known among railroad men in this city. Their bodies were cooked almost beyond recognition by the escaping steam. Mr. Neil was seventy six years of age and for several years his family had been begging him to retire and spend the remainder of his life in comfort.

Engine No. 71, of the mogul type, which had been in service but two weeks, was pulling the train of four coaches. It left the track, plunged down an embankment, landing on its side. The baggage coach followed. The three Pullman coaches held the rails. They were torn from their trucks and the passengers badly shaken.

The train is due at Delaware at 1:4[illegible] a.m. but the train was late and pulled into the Delaware yards at 1:[illegible] running at least sixty miles an hour.

The Delaware Gazette of Saturday gives the following account of the wreck:

On the curve just across the east Winter street crossing the rails spread and the engine, tender and combination car darted down the tracks of the Springfield division while the remaining cars, although they left the rails, followed the main line closely for a distance of two hundred feet, then plowed into the soft earth, letting the cars [illegible] tilted partially on their right side. The coaches did not telescope but many windows were smashed. Nearly all the trucks were bent and twisted and the front vestibule on the first coach was completely demolished.

The engine was completely wrecked. The iron monster after leaving the main track ran upon the ties for about [illegible] feet, then pitched forward, turning completely over, and when stopped was headed in the opposite direction from which it was going when the accident happened. The tender remained in an upright position while the baggage car was piled in a tangled mass between the engine and the remainder of the cars along the main track.

The cab was torn completely from the engine and laid quite a distance further down the track. At the time of the wreck a hard rain was falling which made the scene all the more terrible.

Help arrived from all directions. The wrecking crew and the large force of shop men rushed to the scene and began the work of taking the people from the wreck.

The body of Engineer Sheppard was found under the rear trucks of the tender, it being necessary to remove a few heavy beams before the body could be released. Death must have been instantaneous. The injured were hurriedly carried to convenient places where the Delaware physicians did everything in their power to relieve their sufferings.

The fire department was soon on hand and although no fire broke out the firemen were ready for any emergency. The police were active in the search for the missing members of the train crew and as soon as baggagemaster Neil was taken from the wreck [illegible] carried him to the Colvin home. The body of the dead engineer was laid off to one side of the wreck until the other men had been rescued, then carried into the Big Four baggage room where it was viewed by hundreds of people.

Fireman Gore and Newsboy Haas were taken to the Delaware House where their injuries were dressed. Mr. Gore, who escaped with only a few slight scratches, could tell nothing as to what he did. When interviewed by a Gazette man he had not learned that his engineer had been killed and those at his bedside were endeavoring to keep the sad news from him. He stated that he was dazed by the shock but could not remember how he got out of the cab.

Newsboy Haas said that the smoker soon filled with steam and he had a hard time of it reaching a window, which he kicked out, and half unconscious climbed through it. He stated that the experience was terrible. His arms were very badly burned and he suffered greatly. When No. 46 went through Delaware Haas left on it for Cleveland.

Conductor Kishler was found to be more seriously injured than was at first suspected. He was carried to one of the trucks at the baggage room and his wounds dressed. Beside his arm and shoulder being mashed his right foot was badly mangled. A special train was made up and in charge of a [illegible] trained nurse the injured man was taken to a Columbus hospital where every effort will be made to [illegible] foot, although the doctor in charge [illegible] it might be found necessary to amputate the member.

During the afternoon the scene of the terrible disaster was visited by hundreds of people and the wreck is [illegible] the worst ever experienced in the immediate vicinity of Delaware.

It was the Twentieth Century flyer that was wrecked at Flint in November 1[illegible] and the positions of the cars in the [illegible] are very much the same. [illegible] who witnessed the wreck were impressed with the fact and much [illegible] heard in connection with the coincidence.

Some [illegible] a good deal thicker than they [illegible].

them in triumph around the hall That is a favorite stunt of the delegate and frequently results in much confusion because of his inability to find the place from which he took the standard when he wants to replace it

At the east end of the hall a complete postoffice is being fitted up with letter boxes for each delegate and alternate This will be under the charge of Assistant Postmaster Henry P Wyman of St Louis William M Drumm the efficient secretary to the sergeant at arms and McDonald Martin custodian A corps of carriers will be in attendance to carry the mail to the delegates in their seats thus making the mail delivery as nearly as rapid as telegraphy as it is possible to make it

Eight or ten long distance telephone boxes are rang d on the north side in close proximity to the stairs leading to the telegraph rooms

In the southeast corner of the building an emergency hospital has been located fitted up with all the latest appliances This has been established under the auspices of Dr John H Simon president of the St Louis board of health Doctors two trained nurses an ambulance and attendants with stretchers will be in constant attendance

An innovation is the appointment as officers of the convention of a number of honorary medical officers Each member of the national committee has in response to invitation, named on these officers from each state and a finely engrossed and colored commission has been issued to them as well as to the doorkeepers assistant sergeant at arms special officers ushers etc

Every attention has been given towards promoting the comfort of the delegates and others in the hall Numerous electric fans have been placed at advantageous points to keep the air cool and in circulation In the north east corner has been placed a huge ice box to contain 20 tons of ice and a large quantity of the finest drinking water obtainable A corps of young men dressed in white duck will carry iced water through the hall for the use of thirsty delegates and guests

A special band stand to accommodate thirty pieces has been erected above the gallery facing the speakers' stand Telephone and electric bell connections between Sergeant at arms Martin s desk and the leader of the band will enable the former to give the necessary directions as to what music is most appropriate at the moment

There will be an efficient fire patrol under the direction of the chief of the city fire department and a still alarm force armed with fire extinguishers Two hundred policemen will be on duty outside of the hall to preserve order about the entrance

The subcommittee on arrangements of the national committee will hold its final meeting at 10 a m , July 2 There will be nothing for the members to do except to select the temporary chairman for the convention This will probably be John Sharpe Williams of Mississippi C A Walsh of Iowa will be the temporary secretary and Colonel John I Martin of St Louis, the temporary sergeant at arms Captain Frank M Brust has been selected as chief doorkeeper

The following will be the reading clerks C J Cavin of Raton New Mexico P E Murphy of Leavenworth Kansas W W Brandon of Montgomery Alabama Jef Pollard of St Louis and John I Donavan of Milwaukee

A number of notices of contests have been filed with Secretary Walsh Among them are contests from the the Second district of Maine the First Second Third Fourth Fifth and Sixth districts of Pennsylvania and from the District of Columbia Unofficial advices suggest that other contests may be made but these are all that have been filed so far

The national Democratic committee will meet at 10 a m on July 4 to take up these contests and the other preliminary work of the convention

There is talk of organizing a big parade for the night of July 5 the eve of the convention in which all the marching clubs that come to the convention and the military and semi-military organizations of the city are to take part but the movement has not yet taken definite form

NEW DINING HALL AND KITCHEN PLANNED

They Will Be Erected at Once at the Fairground

The members of the executive committee of the Marion county board of agriculture will meet soon and go over the plans for a new dining hall to be erected at the fairground The hall is to be twenty four by fifty feet in its dimensions while the kitchen attached will be twenty by thirty feet

Three members of the committee met Tuesday and decided on plans which now await the approval of the entire committee As soon as this is obtained bids will be called for and contractors will be expected to submit their bids to be opened July 16

Mr and Mrs W J Warner and two sons Loring and Howry left this morning for a ten days visit at the exposition.

The press is prone to unload more or less ridicule on Elijah Dowie But it can't be truthfully said that he's without genius If he doesn't get what he goes after he brings back something else just as good Some months since he went to Australia to pick up some yellow metal He was driven off the continent but he bobs up in New York Saturday with a handsome young Swiss convert said to be heiress to millions who is reputed to be the affianced bride of his son Any time 'Lijah overlooks an opportunity to advance his cause it's worth presentation in type

It's almost a foregone conclusion that Senator Fairbanks' toga will fall upon some literary light

The Chicago News shudders for fear that Lincoln J Carter will utilize Secretary Hay's immortal line "Perdicaris alive or Raisuli dead" as a title for one of his melodramatic thrillers

No doubt President Roosevelt will be "on needles" until July 27 when the official notification occurs

We presume we will next hear that Mr Perdicaris has decided to take to the lecture platform

Probably another reason why Colonel Bryan is so bitter against Pirate Hopkins is that pirates usually have a hankering for gold

Wonder if Judge Parker is holding his corner on silence for a rising market

It's hard to conceive of any punishment sufficiently severe to meet the needs of the scavengers who have been dumping night soil into the city's storm water sewers In case the guilty parties can be apprehended—and it is hoped they will be—they should be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law That no serious results have been the consequence of their acts should not be considered in mitigation nor should they be allowed to plead ignorance of possible consequences

Uncle Joe Cannon should speedily recover from his indisposition now that the vice presidential nightmare no longer holds chief place in his dreams

If there's anything in the saying—"Old men for counsel young men for war"—President Roosevelt must be preparing for a mighty struggle Judging by his cabinet

The Washington Post accuses the Chicago platform committee of cribbing Mr Root's speech

We presume that Colonel Bryan's remark that he stands just where he did eight years ago may be taken to mean that he still stands for Bryan

Togo is doing his utmost to dispose of the remnants before the arrival of the Baltic invoice

Governor Nash is congratulating himself over his physician's utter failure as a prophet The ex governor was sufficiently recovered from his recent illness to vote at a Brannock law election last week

We can't evade the thought that the personnel of the St Louis Democratic gathering may possibly be improved should the Hon William F Finley of Kenton persevere in his project to send a wooden Indian substitute

The avowal of those two Kentucky colonels that they saw a flock of angels flying over a wheat field must be construed to indicate that the Blue Grass state is putting out something new in the way of liquid delight

By the way what's happened to the Kilbourne boom?

In the light of the treatment accorded Dowie on his trip around the world, his followers can no longer reasonably fear that he will walk off with the Zion funds and settle in some far off country It'll be hard to coax Dowie outside the United States in the future

The agricultural department after a thorough test has decided not to recommend boric acid as a health food

If there's anything in the assertion of the Atlanta Constitution that the South will control the situation at St Louis and throw its influence to Parker the public may prepare for the spectacle of an eminent Nebraskan walking down the aisle and out of the convention hall

The Washington Post concedes that Colonel Bryan may be standing just where he did politically eight years ago but ventures to suggest that he stands a good deal better now than then with the paying teller

Persistent use of his name in connection with the Democratic nomination has driven former President Cleveland into absolute retirement says a New York wire If our recollection is correct it was the use of Judge Parker's name in the same way which caused him to do the Sphinx act

We give little credence to the story that Bryan has deserted the Hearst cause and is supporting Olney If our view of the situation is correct the standard supported by the colonel bears five letters all right but they don't spell Olney

The Wyandot Indians are figuring on the strength of the school enumeration that the population of their chief village is 1007 a growth of about twenty per cent since the federal census of 1900 As Artemus Ward would say Those Indians are "amoozing kusses"

We presume Mr Fairbanks' parents moved over into Indiana to give him the advantage of a literary finish

Abdul Hamid's brother Murad holds that twenty eight years in prison is enough and that it's about his time to locate a nice soft spot on the Turkish throne

The New York Herald having remarked that snake venom is quoted at $15 per dram causes the Washington Post to observe that the antidote costs only fifteen cents per dram and is much more popular From which we infer that prices are high in the East or that the Post paragrapher is inclined to be finicking in the matter of his liquid refreshment

A Washington writer calls attention to the fact that the national candidate with a middle name has fared badly in recent years and then makes the claim that all the Democratic candidates this year have middle names It's strange how those Washington correspondents will persist in overlooking Grover Cleveland and Richard Olney

Commenting on the fact that John P Hopkins boss and bolter held the recent Illinois Democratic convention in the hollow of his hand Editor Finley of the Kenton Press asks "What under the dome of heaven is a decent man to do?" and then goes into the meat of his complaint with that high degree of enthusiasm which would indicate a personal interest?

The New York Sun is booming Grover Cleveland as the nation's first and greatest trust buster If our recollection is correct Mr Cleveland's alleged chief fault in the eyes of the Democracy was his closeness to the people represented by the Sun

DAMAGE DONE BY THE STORM

THE ELECTRIC COMPANIES ARE CHIEF SUFFERERS

Columbus Delaware and Marion Electric Railway Company Is the Chief Sufferer but the Local Railway Service Is Interrupted

The storm of Wednesday night which was accompanied by a heavy electrical display did a great deal of damage to the electrical service of the city and county Thursday morning found the telephone telegraph and electric railway service in a badly crippled condition

Telephones in every quarter of the county were cut off by the burning out of fuses [illegible] and the [illegible] circuit of the local lighting plant suffered much The [illegible] depending on this circuit for light and power were shut off until about 10 o'clock next morning the necessary repairs being made as quickly as possible

As to the local street car lines and the C D and M Electric Railroad company's line the damage was confined to [illegible] grounded wires [illegible] with the running of cars through the early morning For some time the cars managed to come over the C D and M as far as the end of Davids street where passengers were unloaded and taken up Repairs were made however before 10 o'clock so that cars could come into the city Thursday afternoon much damage done had been repaired and the service has been fairly well restored

FARM LIFE IS NOT IN FAVOR AT PRESENT

Attention has been directed to the fact that not a single member of the class which graduated from the Massachusetts Agricultural college this year has determined to adopt farming as a vocation One of the graduates has secured a position with an agricultural paper another has decided to engage in horticulture but all of the others will follow professions or pursuits that are not even remotely connected with the farming industry This situation is especially notable in the Massachusetts college but it is [illegible] common in a less marked degree in the other states The reason is not difficult to find by those at all familiar with the systems of education followed in the agricultural colleges

Nearly every state in the union now has an agricultural college endowed in part by the government which apportions a part of the yearly proceeds from the sale of public lands for the support of those institutions which were originally designed to encourage the art of husbandry and to educate students and train them in the science of farming The agricultural colleges are themselves to blame for the fact that such a small proportion of their graduates adopt farming as a vocation In many of these schools the course of study is but very slightly different from that in the regular colleges and universities Considerable attention is paid to the languages and classics and as a rule very little to the actual practical work of farming the study of the science of making two blades of [illegible] grow where but one grew before The student does not obtain the kind of an education that causes him to look with favor upon farming as an occupation and there is no certainty but that a closer adherence to the purpose for which the agricultural colleges were established would cause a decrease in the number of students rather than an increase in the number of [illegible] who desire to become farmers

Numerous suggestions have been of*fered for remedying* this very serious defect in the educational system in agricultural colleges One proposition is that the course of nature study should be commenced in the primary grades in the public schools and that more attention should be paid to the study of botany and plant growth This would be desirable regardless of the plans of the student for his life vocation but in our opinion there is a better and more effective method of instilling a desire for farm life and farm work into the boy Each agricultural college has or should have a field of broad dimensions Some of them have farms of several hundred acres Too often under the present system this ground is used for base ball diamonds golf links and athletic fields We suggest that each student be allotted a portion of this field an acre or more according to the number of boys in the school and the size of the available farm and that such student be allowed to pocket the profits of his labor on his allotment deducting the minimum sum to cover rental Under such a system the students could experiment with different grains and vegetables study soil culture on their own allotments and by observation of the experience of fellow students learn in a practical manner the financial profit to be derived from tilling the soil

No other legitimate investment of labor or money brings such speedy certain and liberal return as the partnership between the farmer and nature in the production of the fruits of life for which there is always a strong and growing demand This [illegible] well directed effort will appeal to the commercial sense of the American boy no matter how little he likes the drudgery of farm life a share of which seems unavoidable Once show the boy that farming pays as a cold blooded financial proposition and offers the additional inducements of good health a life in the open and utter freedom from the directions and exactions of employers [illegible] in our judgment but little difficulty in turning the graduates of agricultural colleges back to the farms —Washington Post

A Northern Paper on the South's Outcry.

The outcry of the southern press against the suffrage plank of the Republican platform is an appeal to prejudice The convention declared that where any state has abridged its electorate its representation in the house of representatives and in the electoral college shall be reduced in the manner prescribed by the constitution The question is not a racial one but whether the constitution shall be obeyed The plank by no means represents the views of extremists upon the question of negro suffrage It does not demand that the negro shall not be debarred from voting It is applicable to northern and western states as well as southern It affects the representation in California and Massachusetts as well as in South Carolina or Louisiana In fact many extreme supporters of the right [illegible] without property or educational qualifications to vote look upon the constitutional provision with hostile eyes because of the theory of suffrage which it involves

Briefly it can be said that the theory of suffrage which makes this provision of the constitution possible is to the effect that voting is a privilege and not a right a privilege in the hands of the states subject to certain limitations of the federal constitution preventing its denial to any person because of race color or previous condition of servitude [illegible] either in its constitution or by legislative enactment can prescribe any electoral qualification it sees fit with this limitation but by abridging the votes of males over the age of twenty one years it subjects its representation in the house of representatives and in the electoral college to [illegible] Section two of article fourteen of the constitution declares that when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for president and vice president of the United States representatives in congress [illegible] the executive and judicial officers of a state or the members of the legislature thereof is denied to any of the male members of such state being twenty one years of age and citizens of the United States or in any way abridged except for participation in rebellion and other crime the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens twenty one years of age in such state

Frankly the object is that the South shall no longer have representation in congress or the electoral college on the number of negro citizens while denying them the right to vote The South has always had an unfair advantage in this respect Prior to the war they were given representation on the basis of the slave since the war and by the adoption of the restrictive constitutions they have continued to have an unfair advantage The negro can no longer be used to give the South some greater representation in the house and in the electoral college and at the same time be denied the right to vote If he can not vote the representation must be reduced

The states want to deny any one the right to vote except under the limitations and it is not to be denied but it can not get congressmen and members of the electoral college on the strength of the number of men they deny the right to If they abridge their electorate they must suffer the penalty of having their representation reduced

The Democratic party is fond of prating about the constitution and of building parties about it But when it comes down to observing so distinct and clear a provision as that of the fourteenth amendment its enthusiasm for that document immediately goes below the freezing point —Cincinnati Times Star

PLUCK AND INDUSTRY WILL NOT BE DENIED

The Story of the Admission to the Bar of a Brass Moulder

[Ohio State Journal]

Those unobserving persons who believe that the young man who must depend solely upon his own industry pluck and self reliance has no chance of forging ahead in these days of trusts and combines will do well to note the story of Mr Oliver W Buchwalter of Columbus brass moulder and attorney at law

Mr Buchwalter who is a young man has a wife and four children very little money and unlimited ambition When he made up his mind to study law the fact that he must earn a living for his family did not discourage him He worked in a brass foundry all day and pegged away at his books a good part of every night At this double turn he continued for about three years

Two or three weeks ago he felt himself prepared to pass the state exami*nation for admission to the Ohio bar* Unable to leave his work at the shop in the daytime he sent his wife to the office of the clerk of the supreme court *to give notice that he wished to sub*mit to the test six months hence She was asked why Mr Buchwalter did not arrange to take the examination then about to be held

"To be perfectly frank about it" said Mrs Buchwalter with a smile "my husband will not receive his next pay for two weeks and we haven't the money to pay the fee"

The fee is eight dollars and the clerk insisted upon making the loan Mr Buchwalter's name appears in the list of those who passed the examination though fifty one of the 242 applicants failed His grade was well above the required mark It may be added that he paid the loan of eight dollars the day he received his next wages

We know nothing about Mr Buchwalter beyond what we have printed But with this knowledge we predict that he will make a success in his new profession He deserves it if for no other reason for the example he has set for those who sit around and say there's no chance to better one's con*dition these days*

THE HESSIAN FLY AND WHEAT MIDGE.

The Hessian fly and the Wheat midge are noticed in the wheat fields of the Ohio experiment station in numbers sufficient to cause considerable damage Naturally the question arises as to whether the attack is general In order to determine this point the station earnestly desires that its friends throughout the state who are *interest*ed in wheat growing make an examination of their wheat fields and report the result The Hessian fly at this season is just passing into the pupa or flax seed stage having finished its work as far as damage to the wheat is concerned but the effects will appear shortly before harvest time as a large per cent of the injured stalks will then fall The insect itself does not in the least resemble a fly but at this stage is of a dull brown color about one eighth of an inch long and very much the shape of a flax seed It is usually found under the sheath of the leaves and lying close against the wheat stalk near the surface of the ground or between the first and second joints In making the examination pull up 100 stalks in various parts of the field trying as far as possible to get a fair sample After this carefully examine each plant in the places indicated While the Hessian fly has just stopped operations the Wheat midge is just starting It is now a small pinkish maggot barely noticeable to the unaided eye and is found feeding on the newly formed wheat berries inside the glume or chaff and in turn causing the grain to shrivel In making this ex*amination take the 100 stalks used in* the Hessian fly determination and examine one grain on each head for the presence of the midge as heretofore described

The report of the examination as well as the one on the Hessian fly should be made to the Ohio experiment station Wooster Ohio giving name and post-office address of the observer date of observation name of wheat date of planting crop number of plants examined and number of plants affected

In the latter examination a small lens would be of considerable value but the work can be done without Suitable lenses can be purchased at a small cost from local drug store

Care and Management of Country Lawns

The following paper on the care and management of Country Lawns was read at a last meeting by a young lady member of the Pioneer Farmers' club

There is nothing more pleasing to the eye than a well kept lawn surrounding a country home As the yards of most of our homes have already been defined and our next duty is to make them as beautiful as we can [illegible] to length and width we must have the chief requisites—a clean smooth well sodded plot [illegible] well [illegible] tree This applies to the part lying in the rear of the dwelling as well as that in the front

After the [illegible] our labors are not yet ended for lawns need attention from the first warm days of spring through the entire summer

The first treatment should be given it with a roller which packs the sod that has been upheaved during winter back into the ground and at the same time makes it more level for the use of the lawn mower

The last snow have scarcely melted until nature has found a carpet of brightest green over the land

How we watch the coming of the grass and clover But [illegible] last too long before we are [illegible] the grass has grown to such a height that the lawn presents a neglected appearance So the use of the mower should be early As it can not be run near enough to the fence [illegible] to cut every spear of grass extra time must be given to the clipping of this or the result which we wish to obtain by the mowing will be lost Sheep shears or a large pair of scissors are very convenient for removing the fringe

Weeds if possible should not be allowed to multiply We all know the difficulty of killing the plantain and dandelion but at the present day tools may be obtained which remove them so [illegible] that with a little patience they may be destroyed

As for trees they are indispensable to a pretty lawn [illegible] on different sides of the house to protect it from the sun [illegible] as well as to give shade Some of our finest trees [illegible] A few [illegible] which [illegible] well trimmed [illegible] young standing here and there [illegible] will [illegible] if [illegible] but [illegible]

A beautiful lawn is never complete without flowers [illegible]

TO ESTABLISH MARKET PLACE

Citizens of North Main Street Have Organized a Movement.

PROPOSE TO HAVE MARKET SOUTH OF GEORGE STREET

Organized Labor Is Also in Favor of the Movement--A Look Backward at the Market Place Idea Which Has Been Discussed Pro and Con for Many Months

A movement is on foot to establish a market place on Main street north of the railroads. A number of the merchants in that vicinity are behind the project they being desirous of getting more trade in that end of the city.

A petition will be presented to the board of public service in the near future asking that body to grant the privilege of locating a market place on one side of the street as far as George street. All the property owners along the east side of the street are said to be willing to sign the petition.

Last summer council appropriated $[illegible]00 with which the board of public service was to establish a market place but nothing was ever done in the matter because it developed that there was no acceptable place to locate it save at the old city building. It was discovered that $500 would not be sufficient to transform the yard around the city building into a suitable place and the market proposition was tabled indefinitely. Ever since however the Central Trades council and the local branch of the Federation of Labor have been working for a market place. They have indorsed the movement being pushed by the north Main street merchants. It is likely that the service board will grant the permission for the use of this street unless the parishoners of St Mary's church strongly object.

GRAIN RATES MODIFIED BY FREIGHT CARRIERS

On Behalf of Grain Trade Such Negotiations Are Completed

New York July 1—After a series of conferences with the local grain dealers extending over a year a committee of traffic officers representing all trunk lines have agreed on a [illegible] agreement. It has [illegible] been formally adopted by the [illegible] of the following roads: the New York Central, [illegible], Pennsylvania, Delaware Lackawanna and Western, Lehigh Valley, New York Ontario and Western railways and [illegible] and Ohio.

On behalf of the grain trade the negotiations have been carried on by the trade and transportation committee of the Produce Exchange will have forwarded the agreement to the board of managers for the latter's consideration at its meeting July 7. The new agreement relates to the inspection grading consolidation and delivery of grain arriving by rail at the port of New York. It is very lengthy but provides in brief that the railroad companies may put together in elevators warehouses boats or barges provided by themselves for the purpose grain of the same kind and grade without regard to ownership after the same has been inspected and weighed in accordance with the agreement. But nothing therein contained shall be construed as [illegible] receivers of grain or the right of preserving the identity of [illegible] grain if they shall so elect not as depriving shippers of the right of preserving the identity of [illegible] grain consigned to this market if they shall so elect subject only to such uniform conditions as may be made by the railroad companies for that purpose.

NEW POSTMASTER NAMES ASSISTANT

HORACE WILLIAMS GETS ASSISTANT PARKER'S PLACE

Postmaster Dickerson Decides to Start in With New Assistant When Transfer Is Made Job Pays Thirteen Hundred Dollars

Horace Williams will be assistant postmaster beginning with the new administration of Postmaster M B Dickerson on Friday July 1st. Mr Dickerson decided upon the appointment Wednesday and forwarded a notification to the department at Washington. The position pays $1 [illegible]00 per year.

The successful applicant is a representative of the active young Republicans of the city and his recognition is a tribute to qualification and a befitting political reward. Mr Williams has been clean in politics and effectively active in pushing both city and county organization. He has held several business positions of trust and filled them all creditably and will undoubtedly prove an efficient assistant. His position brings him in contact with the public which his marked courtesy will serve him well and his quickness give prompt service to the public. He has been employed by the Marion County Telephone company but was able to close his work there in time to start with the transfer of the office Friday.

THE NEW UHLER AND PHILLIPS STORE

Will Be Formally Opened to the Public July 8 From 7 to 10 P M

The big new Uhler & Phillips store will be formally introduced to the public with a grand opening Thursday evening July 8 from 7 to 10 o'clock.

After weeks of remodeling this store has been practically changed into an entirely new store room. The old postoffice room has been added by removing the interior wall. The entire front has been remodeled, a new cash carrier system of the latest type has been installed, new furnishings and cases added making this the largest, highest [illegible] and finest [illegible] store between Columbus and Toledo.

To fittingly commemorate the opening of the new store for three hours on the evening of July 8th the new store will [illegible] thrown open in all its beauty for the public inspection. An orchestra has been engaged for the occasion, souvenirs of flowers will be given all lady visitors, no goods will be sold but the entire force of sales people will be present to assist in entertaining and showing visitors every attention.

You are cordially invited to attend the opening of this fine store.

FATHER COMES HERE FROM FOREST CITY

Wife Wires Police That He Is Here to Kidnap Her Son Who Is Given Into Her Custody When She Is Divorced Follows the Father Here and Is Met at Station by Him

Thursday afternoon Chief Cornwell received a telephone message from Mrs Lou Clark of Cleveland saying that her divorced husband D[illegible] Clark was on his way to Marion to kidnap their [illegible] year old son [illegible] Clark. She said that the boy was visiting at the home of P H Matson [illegible] street and asked the officer to take the boy in custody and hold him until her arrival in the evening.

Chief Cornwell found the young [illegible] enjoying the circus in company with the Matson boy about [illegible] [illegible] was taken to police headquarters where he was held until the arrival of his mother. The boy's father also showed up but said that he only wanted to see the boy and had no thought of kidnapping him. Clark went to the union station and met his former wife. They then went to police headquarters where they got the boy and all three went to the circus.

It appears that Mr and Mrs Clark separated several years ago. Clark went west and while he was away Mrs Clark secured a divorce and the custody of the child. Thursday morning Clark arrived in Cleveland and went to the home of his former wife. She was not at home. One of the neighbors told him that the boy was visiting at Marion he having made inquiry concerning him. Clark [illegible] the neighbor that he was going to Marion. When Mrs Clark returned home she learned of Clark's visit and immediately notified the local authorities that he intended to kidnap her son.

The Clarks have relatives living in this county.

LOCAL ALLIANCE WINS BEAUTIFUL SILK BANNER

Is the Champion Donor to the Missionary Cause

Word was received in this city Thursday afternoon to the effect that the Young People's Alliance of the Calvary Evangelical church had won the beautiful silken banner at the annual state convention of the Y P A at Findlay. The banner is given to the alliance donating the most money during the year for missionary purposes. The local alliance gave more than $200.

A strong effort is being made to secure the state convention for Marion in 190[illegible].

MUCH VACANT LAND YET

Dangers of Overcrowded Population Shown to Be Still Remote

The material development of the country is quietly progressing at a remarkable rate in one direction which is not given much popular attention says the Kansas City Journal. More than [illegible]8,120 acres of the public lands were turned over to private individuals last year. This means that an area almost equal to that of the state of Indiana has within that time been added to the productive regions of the United States. Most of these newly opened lands were homesteaded by farmers as will be seen from the following figures. There were [illegible] patents of all classes issued within the year. Of this number 47[illegible] are classed as agricultural, [illegible] as Indian allotments, 1 401 as mineral patents, 200 as [illegible] patents, [illegible]70 as private land claims, [illegible] as railroad patents and [illegible] as swamp land patents. The total sum which the government got by way of fees and commissions for issuing these patents was $11 021 711. Under a recent law most of the receipts from the sale of public lands will henceforth be set aside for reclaiming arid lands by irrigation.

In the public domain there are still unappropriated [illegible]80 579 07[illegible] acres of surveyed land and 491 976 109 acres of unsurveyed lands or a total of more than 970 95[illegible],000 acres. A great many tracts in this immense area of course will always remain uncultivated and unsettled but it has been estimated that when the contemplated system of irrigation shall be put into working order so much good land will be opened that a population as large as the whole nation's present population could find room there to thrive prosperously and contentedly.

Rapid strides are now being made in the developing of the public domain. The excitement and uproar of former pioneer days are absent in this work but the process is marked and very effective. The passenger traffic on western railroads is evidence of this fact. Agreeable reflections arise in contemplating that the United States still owns so much arable public land. The dangers of an overcrowded population by immigration or natural increase are still remote. The census for many years yet to come will not show an excess of people above what the west will need in settling up its vacant lands.

If there is anything a man detests more than another it is a speaking portrait of his wife's mother.

The Old Independence Bell and the Fourth of July

No other single feature of the coming Independence day celebration at the great fair at St Louis will be [illegible] enshrined in historical [illegible] as the old Liberty bell [illegible] brought from its Philadelphia [illegible] add dignity to the patriotic [illegible] It bears with it in its journeys an atmosphere of its own [illegible] that subdues [illegible] the [illegible] most [illegible] the [illegible]

[illegible] recent journey to [illegible] the bell's seventh [illegible] of the world Its first [illegible] purpose of [illegible] Its later [illegible] home to [illegible] had remained [illegible] sion of its lofty quarters in the [illegible] house for twenty six years when it was known positively that the British army would occupy Philadelphia in September [illegible] It was taken [illegible] and removed to Allentown for safe [illegible] When the army [illegible] the City of Brotherly Love the bell was among the earliest refugees to return

Old Liberty's other journeys were [illegible] vastly different [illegible] from those which made the hasty flight to Allentown [illegible] All of its other tours [illegible] exhibition purposes and the [illegible] splendors and prodigal [illegible] been lavished on it In 18[illegible] it was taken to New Orleans [illegible] chief attraction for the [illegible] from there It was Chicago's [illegible] guest in 1893 and no distinguished [illegible] tion to the World's fair [illegible] In 1895 it went south again [illegible] Atlanta exposition [illegible] it was made [illegible] feature at the Charleston (S C) exposition

Until the time of the Declaration and even a little later the bell hung in a heavy wooden frame which was ordered by the [illegible] when the first casting [illegible] from England The steeple was demolished in 1781 and the bell was hung in the tower below The model of the bell was [illegible] cast in the reign of Henry III in memory of Edward the Confessor which was hung in the clock tower of Westminster and was popularly known as Great Tom

Old [illegible] of the succeeding eighty years [illegible] varied as it was conspicuous For twenty three [illegible] it continued to summon the [illegible] to their public duties On many of these occasions its loud [illegible] for the discussion [illegible] which [illegible] meant either the weal or woe of the infant colonies It called them with a new emphasis on Sept [illegible] 1764 when the messenger of the Massachusetts bay colony arrived with the news that the agent of that colony in London had been notified to co[illegible] most to have the sugar act repealed [illegible] the stamp act prevented [illegible] later it rang even more [illegible] when the assembly decided to follow the example of its more [illegible] compatriots On Sept [illegible] the bell summoned the assembly to consider a plan for a congress of the colonies A fortnight afterward it rang out indignantly to give the legislative body an opportunity to protest against the imposition of the stamp act On Oct [illegible] of the same year the bell was muffled and tolled as the ship bearing the stamps came up the Delaware and when the act went into operation the funereal tolling was repeated On Feb 4 1771 the bell called the citizens together on the statehouse square to advocate [illegible] against the right of parliament to tax the colonies On June [illegible] when the port of Boston was closed the bell was again muffled and tolled [illegible] afterward it called together another town meeting to pledge the city to the cause of liberty

When news of the fight at Lexington reached Philadelphia the bell once more summoned the people to the statehouse square and an exciting meeting was held This was the most tragic moment of the bell's existence On May 10 17[illegible] it ushered in the session of the Second congress Events [illegible] preparing for the culmination [illegible] the actual baptism of the bell On June [illegible] 1776 Richard Henry Lee offered his resolution for the independence of the colonies On July [illegible] at noon the supreme moment arrived The bell now Liberty bell indeed proclaimed in its bravest and most [illegible] tones the independence of the colonies

Thereafter the bell continued to peal out its messages to the citizens of the newborn republic It had outlived its original purpose but it found new duties to perform After it had rung in the peace of April 16 1783 it was used to proclaim the national anniversary, to usher in the new year to welcome distinguished visitors and to toll requiems for the noted dead For Lafayette [illegible] visit to the spot where the Declaration was signed it rang out its heartiest welcome On July 4 1826 the fiftieth anniversary of independence it pealed forth in commemoration of that event and on the same day it tolled the deaths of Thomas Jefferson and John Adams

After three quarters of a century of service in the cause of liberty the old bell became silent On July 6 1835 while tolling the death of Chief Justice John Marshall it cracked As it had announced the birth of the republic, it was fitting that its last public duty should be to announce the passing of the man who was the survivor of the leaders of the Revolution and the signers of the Declaration

It Is Fourth of July All Over the World

By ALOYSIUS COLL

I

When the muskets flashed at Lexington
With an ominous boom and bang,
When the ancient bell of Liberty
With the chimes of Freedom rang,
Their tidings faintly reached the ears
Of a faithful little band,
But now the Fourth of July is heard
In every peopled land!

II

Each mount and knoll in Columbia
Is another Bunker Hill,
Where bombs explode and cannon roar
And pennants flutter still,
And up and down the smoky green,
In a chaos of fire and noise,
Are Freedom's rampant flying squads
Of charging men and boys.

III

From the isles of the Caribbean main
The screaming rockets rise,
Like an eagle that seeks a pride of place
For Liberty in the skies,
An eagle whose wings are fluttering flags,
The flags of the free, unfurled,
His tail a burning sheaf of stars
That shine for all the world.

IV

In old Manila's footworn streets,
Across her glittering bay,
The patriotic fires are lit
For Independence day
The thundering memories are kept,
And the blazing signs unfurled,
For now indeed it is Fourth of July
In every nook of the world!

V

Some day, when every tribe shall see
The light of the magic done,
The fiery breath of Tyranny
Shall sink with the setting sun,
And then to proud Columbia,
Where Freedom first unfurled
Her flag, shall rise the glad acclaim
Of a liberated world.

Development of Submarines In Naval Warfare

AT the present time there is much activity among naval experts over the matter of submarine navigation. This is due in part, but not wholly, to the almost frantic efforts both of the Japanese and their opponents to secure any submarine craft which is likely to prove effective. For upward of a quarter of a century the interest in this branch of naval equipment has been subject to periodical stimulation. Until recently, however, the interest aroused by the heralding of some coming submarine wonder has not survived a test. Failure in some essential has relegated the project to the realm of the improbable. The performance of the submarine torpedo boat Fulton, constructed by the Holland company and exploited off Newport for the benefit of the navy board of inspection and survey, goes far to re-establish public faith in this species of war agent. The recent tests which were made by a board composed of six of the leading submarine experts of the navy were for the purpose of establishing the fact as to whether or not any existing type of submarine boat showed sufficient merit to warrant the department in expending the $[illegible]50,000 appropriated by congress for that purpose. It was expected that Captain Simon L. Lake's Protector would enter the competition, but a few weeks ago the Lake boat was taken away from Newport, and it is now thought that the Japanese government has purchased her.

There is no doubt that the Fulton is the most perfect specimen of the Holland type of submarine craft in existence. The most untiring pains were taken during its construction to avoid structural complications, and for a year after completion the staunch little vessel was subjected to a variety of tests designed to prove her trustworthiness. According to the examining board, the Fulton possesses all of the merits of her predecessors, the Adder, the Shark, the Porpoise and others of the Holland type which the government already owns. The board is also of the opinion that she is superior to those boats in several important particulars.

The difficulties in the way of submarine navigation have been so numerous that it was felt by naval engineers that much had been accomplished when within recent years they had been reduced to the difficulty of securing safety, of obtaining fair speed, of steering, of maintaining stability and of direction and discharging the torpedo. The Fulton has eliminated the problem of safety. As to speed, it has been found that an excess of ten knots when submerged is not to be accomplished as yet. The motor most available for under water travel has probably been the subject of more conjecture and experiment than any other point connected with this species of navigation. Storage batteries, as at present constructed, are too heavy. Steam is out of the question for obvious reasons, and the other usual means of propulsion are equally inefficient in subsurface navigation. The most feasible motor has been found in a gas engine which develops high pressure by means of explosions. Until recently it was impossible to keep the exhaust gases from escaping into the boat. There was also the danger of detection from the escaping bubbles and the smell of gas. As to steering, there remain obstacles yet to be overcome. When under water it is not possible to see more than 100 feet in advance even when at rest; when the boat is in motion the difficulty is greatly increased. The Fulton is provided with a sensitive compass which will give warning of the approach of a hull of copper, bronze, aluminum or some other nonmagnetizable metal. The most important device, however, is the periscope. It is in reality a sort of circular camera. When those below wish to find out what is going on [illegible] water they thrust it upward through a circular opening in the top of the boat. There is formed on the reflecting table a picture of the surface with any object that may be upon it in plain view. The periscope is so slender and so long that the motion of the boat interferes with its steadiness. It may prove also to be a means of detection, and a well directed shot from a war ship would be likely to render it ineffective. All submarine boats are fitted with small conning towers projecting a short distance above the hull and having glass covered peepholes. These towers can be used when cruising near the surface, and the top may be opened if the weather is fine. In most boats the opening in the conning tower forms the principal way of ingress and egress.

To secure a reasonable habitability in a submarine boat was a problem that baffled constructors for a long time. The recent test of three [illegible] on the Fulton demonstrated the fact that the little cabin of that craft is quite as [illegible] as quarters on a battleship. Until now there has been little effort made either to warm or cool the boats. Hitherto it has been possible to remain in a submarine craft only a short time without experiencing discomfort from the change of temperature. Besides this there has been no adequate provision for eating and sleeping, and the light has not been good enough to admit of much observation. All this has been overcome. The Fulton went down in one of the slips at the torpedo station at a few minutes before 11 o'clock one evening and [illegible] the next morning a few minutes past 11. The test having covered a little over twelve hours, [illegible] the men who spent the night at the bottom of the slip not only ate, drank, talked, read and played cards, but cooked, lighted their apartment brilliantly with electricity and might have remained with the same comfort. [illegible] the members of the crew feeling that they could have remained submerged for ten days.

[illegible] the greatest difficulty of all [illegible] to be encountered in the discharge of the torpedo. In addition to the [illegible] in which torpedoes are [illegible] and the difficulties of giving them the correct direction at the time of firing, it is necessary that the boat should be nearly horizontal at the moment, else the torpedo will take too deep a dive or rise to the surface at the beginning of its run. The shock of firing also causes great longitudinal disturbance in the boat. The tests made with the Fulton show that much of the difficulty formerly experienced from this cause has been overcome.

It is, of course, unfortunate that the latest improvements in submarine navigation were not made public by the recent tests. The design of the department was to show the utmost fairness in the matter of a choice, and for that reason the competition was arranged. Since the eastern complication [illegible] and for a long time before that period both [illegible] and the Holland company have had numerous opportunities to put their inventions into active service. It would be an interesting coincidence if the two little destructive agents should now see active service on opposing side.

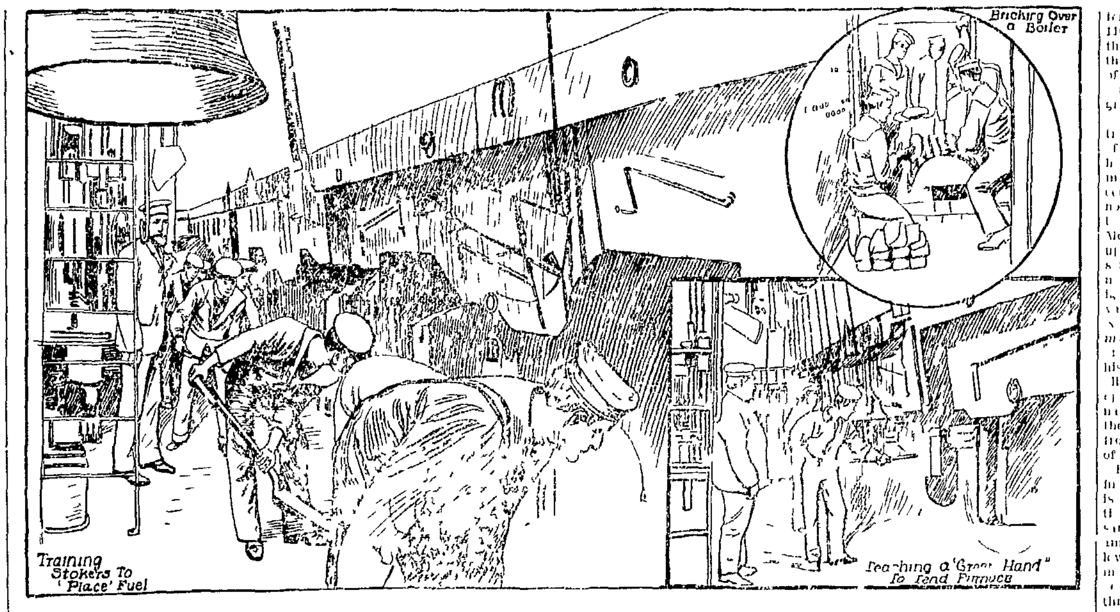
[illegible] from the first submarine boat was built will probably never be known. Alexander the Great was interested in subaqueous navigation, and it was suggested in the thirteenth century. In [illegible] some English ships were destroyed by a machine carrying fire under water. In the early part of the seventeenth century submarine boats were numerous, and by 1727 no less than fourteen types of submarines had been patented in England alone. In [illegible] David Bushnell built his first boat, with which Sergeant Lee attacked the British ship Eagle in New York harbor. He actually got under the ship, and his attack failed only because the screw with which the torpedo was to be attached to the bottom of the Eagle was not sharp enough.

EDGAR W. JONES

MECHANICAL AIDS TO READING

At the meeting of the French Academy of Sciences held recently M. Andre Broca and M. Sulzer communicated a paper on the subject of rapid reading. They showed that the different letters of the alphabet are not all apprehended with the same quickness. For instance, the time taken to recognize an I is nearly one third longer than that taken to recognize an I. They consider that the alphabet is badly designed from a physiological point of view. It should be composed of very simply designed letters, as I or L. Rapidity of reading would thus be increased and brain fag would be notably diminished. It would also be better to have the letters printed in white on a black ground than the system which obtains at present. The time taken to recognize a letter printed in black on a white ground was nearly ten times longer than white on a black ground.

In the Stokehole of the Modern Battleship



Bricking Over a Boiler

Training Stokers To 'Place' Fuel

Teaching a 'Green' Hand To Tend Furnace

NO writer of sea stories has had occasion thus far to make his hero a stoker. In spite of the fact that steam navigation has provided less picturesque material for fiction than was furnished by the sailing craft of long ago, the dearth is not yet so complete that any novelist has been driven to the stokehole for a proper setting.

Nevertheless, the stokehole and its presiding genius are as essential to the [illegible] of steam navigation as was the humble blower to the old fashioned pipe organ. The human beings who delve at the very bottom of the great transatlantic carryalls, which have been not inaptly characterized as heaven above and hades below, may not be subjects fit for idealization, but they are prime necessities in steam navigation.

It is on the warship, however, that a stoker becomes a person of acknowledged consequence. It depends upon him to a great extent whether his vessel shall cut through the waves at the speed that was intended by her designer or whether she shall crawl along at three or four knots under that speed. Bad work or neglect in the stokehole means disappointment and invites disaster of many kinds. It means primarily that the fires are not going to burn properly and that as a consequence the amount of steam [illegible] will be less than is required. It means also that all the plans so carefully formulated by the experts [illegible] are likely to miscarry through the inefficiency or carelessness of those who feed the fires.

Battleships, cruisers or torpedo boats [illegible] badly trained or reckless [illegible] become what are termed [illegible]. In other words, they eat [illegible] drink too much and as a [illegible] sleep too much. The food [illegible] consume too voraciously is [illegible] drink which they imbibe too [illegible] water, and the consequent [illegible] is decreased speed. Such [illegible] will not be depended upon in a [illegible] moment. If the admiral of the [illegible] ask for a spurt of speed [illegible] be ready to respond. It [illegible] remembered also that the [illegible] squadron is the [illegible] of [illegible] ship. The vessels of a [illegible] not be widely separated [illegible] great length of time, for it would not do to leave a straggler to the mercy of the enemy. So it is upon the capability of a single stoker that the movement of an entire squadron sometimes depend.

From this will be seen the necessity for discrimination in the selection of the men who manage the furnaces of a warship. This is so well understood by naval officials that provision has been made by all countries possessed of navies worthy of the name to instruct men in the duties of this important calling. Russia built a special [illegible] for the purpose of training her stokers. England has followed her example and fitted up the old Nelson as a training ship for this class of [illegible]. In Germany, France and Italy special instruction is given at the various navy yards.

In the United States the matter has received proper attention. Naval firemen, as they are known in America, are [illegible] of the [illegible] which constitute the enlisted naval force. A fireman is classed as [illegible] with seamen [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] felt wrought [illegible] with his method of grasping [illegible] in other tongues is [illegible] but in [illegible] it is likely to [illegible] an act of violence [illegible] the part of the novice to constitute actual offense. An impatient expression or a rash movement may precipitate disaster.

The coal must be spread over the fire in a manner calculated to get from it all the heat it is capable of giving in the shortest possible time. Not a shovelful must be wasted. The novice is [illegible] at Uncle Sam's [illegible] he has learned how to do the trick properly—long before he [illegible] proof of his [illegible] that it is not [illegible] knowing [illegible] from a minimum expenditure [illegible] than one impending disaster into victory.

If this scientific manipulation of coal were all that [illegible] might [illegible] the new recruit [illegible] but this is only a beginning. He must now learn to keep his [illegible] free from everything that will interfere with the [illegible] process. [illegible] must be learned there, but one right way to do it. [illegible] in time of course he will become better able to work in a temperature of 110 degrees, but before he arrives at that stage of immunity he will often think of the superior quality of the air of the upper deck, and if he is a little sentimental he may even dream of green fields and brooks.

There is little theory about his training. He actually handles the tools of his trade as he will have to do when he goes to sea. A well prepared fireman is a man of vast knowledge concerning fires, boilers and engines, and nowadays he is expected to have a [illegible] acquaintance with electricity. Most firemen in the course of time pick up much knowledge about boilers and some of them become expert engineers. In the early days of steam navigation a fireman's opportunity for advancement was practically wanting. Now it is entirely different. Not only may a fireman's ability obtain for him any one of a number of petty offices in his own branch, but he actually enjoys all the chances of promotion that are open to any other enlisted man in the navy. There are cases on record in the British navy of men who have risen from the stokehole to be commanders of vessels.

Besides his pay of $[illegible] a month the fireman of a United States ship of war is entitled to all the outfit and rations of the seaman gunner of the same grade. He is provided with an ample supply of clothing and is allowed a ration of [illegible]0 cents a day during his enlistment. If he serves thirty years he is pensioned and is given three-fourths of the highest pay he has ever received. In spite of the hardship attendant upon the calling, there is no lack of candidates. It is possible that this is due in a measure to the fact that the physical requirements are not so rigidly insisted upon as in the case of the naval seaman.

A REMARKABLE PACK OF CARDS

The kaiser has a very remarkable pack of cards containing portraits of celebrated beauties of Europe. The queen of hearts is represented by Queen Victoria, the queen of diamonds by Queen Margherita of Italy, the queen of clubs by the late Empress of Austria, the queen of spades by the czarina. The kaiser is king of hearts, the pope the king of spades, the king of the Belgians is king of diamonds and the king of Italy king of clubs. The knaves represent four presidents of the chief councils, and the aces celebrated dramatic artists.

OBITUARIES.

Elizabeth Pelle, youngest daughter of Nelson and Matilda Stouffer, was born at Morral, Ohio, August 28, 1877, and died at the parental home in Morral Friday morning at 5:30 o'clock, June 10, 1904, aged twenty-six years, nine months and twelve days. About two years ago she became a sad sufferer of Bright's disease. In spite of every effort which kind parents could make for her recovery she gradually declined till death came. She bore her suffering with great patience, seldom complaining of anything, but kept cheerful, having a kind word and smile for all those about her. She was converted under the labors of her pastor in the spring of 188[illegible] and was baptized May 1[illegible] of the same year. She united with the Free Baptist church at Morral, and was ever a good and faithful member, trying always to do her duty in all departments of church work. She was a member and teacher in the Sunday-school, having a class of little girls for a number of years. She was a faithful teacher as long as health would permit. During her last illness she would often tell how she loved her class and asked the friends to pray for them that they might grow up to be christian workers. It was a touching scene at the grave when these little girls came forward to place on her casket a rose as a token of their love. She was conscious of her approaching death and said she was ready to go home to her Savior if it was His will to take her, and wanted all her brothers and sisters to meet her in heaven. She made all arrangements for her funeral, selecting her text, Psalms 17:8, the scripture to be read, pallbearers, organist, songs and singers. She leaves father, mother, three sisters and two brothers and a large number of relatives to mourn her departure. The funeral was held at the residence Sunday, June 12, when a large concourse of people assembled to pay their respects to her memory and to sympathize with the family. The funeral sermon was preached by her pastor, Rev. M. C. Miner. ***

William Day Everett was born in Lincolnshire, England, October 20, 1820. His parents, William and Elizabeth Day Everett, were natives of Lincolnshire, where they both died. William was united in marriage with Hannah Blow May 11, 1853, and in the year 1857 they came to America, settling in Grand township, Marion county, Ohio, where he resided until God called him home, the wife having departed this life November 3, 1896. To them were born four children, George, Edward, Olive, now Mrs. James Rubins, and Rachel, now Mrs. William Hastings. Mr. Everett served in the civil war from October 1, 1864, to its close, being mustered out at Washington, D. C., June 10, 1865. He was with General Sherman in his memorable march to the sea. During his vigor the deceased was a very industrious man, seeking to make his service of benefit to the community as well as to his family. He was honest and upright in all his business methods, kindly disposed as a neighbor. As a father, he was ever indulgent and kind, faithful in all his family duties. Such men are missed, and with the children and grandchildren who mourn their loss, the entire community sustains a great loss and the neighbors extend sympathy to the immediate friends. He was full of years, being eighty-three years, seven months and nineteen days of age. Peace to the memory of the father, grandfather, citizen, neighbor, friend. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. B. F. Reading of McComb, Ohio, at the home of his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James Rubins. Interment in the Paw Paw cemetery. ***

OTTO MAHAFFEY COMES NEAR DROWNING WEDNESDAY

Father Hears Lad's Cries While He Is Bathing in the Little Scioto North of Town and Goes to His Assistance — Lad Is in Semi-Conscious Condition When Rescued

The Hocking Valley [illegible] three miles north of the city was the scene of a remarkable adventure Wednesday afternoon in which Andrew Mahaffey saved the life of his fifteen-year-old son Otto, and did not discover the identity of the youngster until he had brought him to the bank of the river.

According to the story told by Mr. Mahaffey he, accompanied by a friend, drove out to the river at the point mentioned for the purpose of taking a bath. The two noticed a couple of youngsters in the river a short distance away but paid little attention to them while proceeding with their ablutions.

While the men were standing in the water near the bank their attention was drawn to the boys by one of them [illegible] and [illegible] to discover the [illegible]. Mahaffey [illegible] down the bank plunged into the water and [illegible] a point where the water [illegible] fifteen feet deep [illegible] hole in the river which young Mahaffey had stepped into.

Unable to swim the lad rose and sank repeatedly and when reached by his father was [illegible] drowning at the bottom of the river.

With much difficulty Mahaffey managed to bring the boy to the bank where he discovered him to be his own son.

And the Startled Burglar Took to His Heels

THE GRAHAM FARM HOME IS BURGLARIZED TUESDAY

Mrs. Ellen Mack a Near-by Neighbor Sees the Robber Enter the House and Resorts to a Quaint Expedient — The Robber Carries Away Articles of Value

The farm home of Thomas Graham, [illegible] and one-half miles south of the city on the Richland [illegible] was [illegible] Tuesday afternoon while the members of the family were at [illegible].

[illegible] one o'clock [illegible] Mrs. Ellen Mack, a near-by neighbor, [illegible] a strange man enter the Graham home by the front door. Suspicioning that [illegible] was a burglar, she ran to the Graham home and [illegible] discovered that [illegible] was upstairs. There was no one near upon whom she could call for assistance and as a last resort she went to the rear of the house and began ringing the big dinner bell.

This so startled the burglar that he left the house on a dead run and reaching the road doubled his efforts to make good his escape.

Upon the return of the Graham family and a thorough search [illegible] it was found that a revolver, ring [illegible] and about two dollars in money were missing.

The burglar is described as being tall, heavy set with a smooth face and was dressed somewhat after the fashion of a hobo.

[illegible] confession was taken by a [illegible]rapher and will be presented to [illegible] grand jury

Following is the confession of Boodler Gutke as made to Circuit Attorney Folk

I am going to take my medicine The best reparation that I can make for the wrongs I have done is to confess fully to everything in order that the public may realize what has been going on No man can know what I have suffered during the past three years I did not realize that I was committing a crime in taking money from [illegible] until these boodle prosecutions commenced In yielding to the pleadings of my wife who stood by me [illegible] during my trials I have determined to do all I can to atone for my [illegible] against the public The people of St Louis even now do not realize how they have been persistently plundered [illegible] years by the men they elected to make laws for the city [illegible] to tell all and give the details [illegible] all the various deals to my knowledge [illegible] would be filled

I became a member of the house of delegates in 1897 and at once became a [illegible] of the combine of that body [illegible] was an organization composed of nineteen members of the house of delegates for the purpose of selling legislation The man behind this combine and who has been the head of [illegible] all the combines in the house of delegates for the past twenty five years is Ed Butler The first bill that came up after I had become a member of the combine was the Interurban [illegible] bill The combine got $20 000 for the votes on this bill on the Union avenue bill we got $18 000 on the Central Traction bill we got $75 000 [illegible] Third street line bill we got [illegible] the lighting bill we got [illegible] the Belt Line bill $18 000 [illegible] suburban we were to get $75 [illegible] which is now in the safe deposit [illegible] the Lincoln Trust company [illegible] there with the agreement [illegible] would be turned over to us when the bill had been passed

[illegible] some of the largest [illegible] during my term of office there were innumerable others [illegible] from $10 000 to $12 000

[illegible] concluded as follows

[illegible] statement that there is [illegible] corruption in the city of St [illegible] and over that has [illegible] for bribe money or bought [illegible] in the combine in the [illegible] gates

[illegible] known as the boodle gang [illegible] more powerful than the [illegible] city dream of They [illegible] much shaken up [illegible] and their forces [illegible] Ed Butler who is [illegible] of the gang has al[illegible] to capture the circuit [illegible] at the next election [illegible] arrangements so that his [illegible] nominated both by the [illegible] and Democratic parties so [illegible] the election goes he [illegible] charge of the machinery [illegible] ment of law

[illegible] his millions behind it [illegible] that unless the [illegible] St Louis rise up they will [illegible] getting control of the city [illegible]

MARION WILL INVITE GRAND ENCAMPMENT G. A. R.

Plans Looking to Invitation for 1906 Meeting of Veterans

Cooper Post G A R at the meeting Monday night heard reports from the Grand Encampment held at Tiffin earlier in the month and the veterans voted to invite the encampment for 1906 to Marion The 1905 meeting goes to Washington C H At that meeting the Marion post expects to extend its invitation and have the following state encampment held here Marion s central location railroad advantages and fame for hospitality ought to make it an easy matter to have the invitation accepted There is much to be done at home however before the state encampment can be invited It costs something to entertain and this entertainment fund must be guaranteed The Cooper Post veterans are planning to have a committee named to take up the preliminary work in connection with a citizens committee and the spirit back of it all asserts that Marion cannot fail The effort is well worth making

TO DISSOLVE STANDARD OIL

That's the Aim of George Rice of Marietta.

HE CLAIMS IT'S AN UNLAWFUL CORPORATION

Says That It Played a Game on the Ohio Supreme Court.

ASKS COURT FOR TIME TO LIQUIDATE ALL CLAIMS

Instead It Sneaks Out of the State and Is Incorporated Under the Laws of New Jersey The Relief Asked in Mr Rice s Petition Which Is Filed Today Is Quite Drastic Eminent Council Engaged

Trenton N J June 27—George Rice of Marietta Ohio filed a bill in chancery this morning for the dissolution of the Standard Oil company—the New Jersey corporation—it being illegal under the anti trust act and also under the state law

Mr Rice is represented by Charles F Hendrickson Jr of Jersey City and James W M Newlin of Philadelphia

The bill states that Mr Rice owned certain of the original Standard Oil trust certificates and alleges that the Standard Oil trust having been declared unlawful in Ohio its counsel Virgil P Kline S C T Dodd and Joseph Choate procured delay on the part of the Ohio supreme court by pretending that the trustees proposed to liquidate in obedience to the Ohio decree and that instead of liquidating they simply made verbal changes by which the unlawful enterprise was continued and later the New Jersey corporation became a holding company for all the property in the trust so as to preserve the monopoly declared unlawful

It is claimed that all the trust methods are completed by the New Jersey corporation which is itself an illegal enterprise because the charter could only be used for a lawful purpose and it was unlawful thereunder to carry out the original Standard Oil trust agreement and the unlawful result cannot be accomplished either through the New Jersey corporation or through the Rockefeller interest as individuals owning a majority of the stock of the New Jersey corporation and it is claimed that this result can not lawfully be continued through even individual ownership of the underlying companies

The Rice bill asks for drastic relief viz

The declaration that the company is engaged in an unlawful business the appointment of a receiver to take all the property that came from the trust to the New Jersey corporation or which has since been acquired by it and to divide in kind all these assets amongst the stock holders of the New Jersey corporation and the holders of outstanding unsurrendered Standard Oil trust certificates—such as Mr Rice claims—which would continue the trust in a new way

NO FAITH IN EDSON SYSTEM

Board of Public Service Will Refuse To Advertise for Bids.

City Is Already Pretty Well Supplied in That Way. Bonds for Sewage Plant Are Signed but They Will Not Be Sold Until Work on the Plant Is Begun

It is the [illegible] opinion among city officials that the Edson system of garbage and sewage disposal will never be inaugurated in Marion. The situation remains practically the same as it did months ago so far as the construction of the proposed plant is concerned.

In the first place it is argued by city officials who are on the inside of affairs that the Edson system falls far short of the requirements of the state board of health.

Dr C O Probst, secretary of the state board of health, notified Mayor John G Mader, City Solicitor H W Donithen, City Auditor S J Quigley and others that the board favored the septic tank system and advised the city at the time to install a sewage and garbage disposal system containing septic tanks if it would meet the approval of the state authorities. On the contrary the Edson system has no septic tanks and furthermore it is stated that it is experimental. The Edson people admit that their plant would be more or less of an experiment according to statements of city officials.

The action of the board of public service in refusing to advertise for bids and specifications in compliance with an ordinance passed by the city council is taken as an expression of the total lack of confidence in the Edson system. Service board members point out the fact that council once before advertised for bids and specifications for the construction of a sewage disposal plant to be built by Snow & Barbour. The result was that it cost the city $2,500 and nothing came of the matter. Therefore the service board members do not propose to close their eyes and go into a matter of which they know very little, they say. It is stated that the plans and specifications for the Edson system would cost not less than $[illegible],000 and in the event that the plant was never built the city would be out that much and have nothing to show for it save a lot of useless plans.

Mayor Mader and City Auditor Quigley have signed the garbage bonds, 1[illegible]0 of them—amounting to $10,000, after a delay of many weeks but it is announced that the bonds will not be sold until actual work begins on the construction of the plant. In the face of present conditions this is considered improbable.

STEEL TIES FOR USE ON THE STEAM ROADS

Citizen of Big Island Township Has Invented One

John Hurr, a farmer residing in Big Island township has invented a steel railroad tie which if the tests prove satisfactory will be manufactured in this city on a large scale.

Mr Hurr maintains that his invention will obviate the numerous objections to the ties now in use. He obtained consent from the Erie and Big Four railroad companies to experiment with his ties along their tracks, the companies assuring him if his invention proves to be a successful and practical one that they will place orders for them. It is his intention to have some ties manufactured after his plan and to test them at once.

HOWARD WASHINGTON SAWYER THE YOUNG WHITE RENEGADE.

The dusty road elbowed its way into the woods and lost itself in the [illegible] depths.

In woodland a scroll of green marking the river's course housed and fed a happy wholesome multitude that played and worked and sung. A grey squirrel dropped an unripe nut on the drowsy head of mother coon dozing in a leafy cottonwood. As it scampered away with a surreptitious rustle of the foliage a jay bird fluttered at its rude awakening then sounded a shrill alarm, a note of warning that stilled the robin's song and sent the squirrel in haste to its abysmal home in the weather beaten oak.

The gentle breeze crept through the wood like a shiver of silence and portending evil while the tree tops cradled the birds in an easy surging tide of color.

A boy was coming down the road.

The jay bird saw him linger at the culvert to ease his stone bruise. He saw him lift a weight of dust on one brown foot to filter out between his toes and eyed him only as a shrewd old bird can a boy to fathom if possible the subject of his meditations.

Howard Washington Sawyer was the second son of his father's household. He had risen but recently to the dignity of an estate where waists are discarded and one's overalls are held in place with bought-en suspenders.

The suspenders had nickel buckles and a bright red thread of real silk running through them. They also had plenty of elasticity. Howard Washington Sawyer called it stretch. At times his demonstrations of it had been so vigorous in the presence of admiring friends that but two buttons and a peg remained faithful to his service. One cannot always count the cost of buttons when swinging from a limb by one's suspenders when company is present or the success of a circus act depends upon it.

Beneath the blazing June day sun the rank almost overpowering odor of dogfennel and jimpson rose from the dusty weeds that lined the roadside and every itch and smart to which youthful flesh is heir to combined to kindle the sorrow in Howard Washington Sawyer's breast into a raging fire of rebellion.

There had been an uprising and an overturning in his little world. Napoleon was whipped at Waterloo. Howard Washington Sawyer had suffered no less and he was not pretty in defeat. His capitulation had been inglorious and his surrender unconditional if not complete.

His home of empire was shattered and he found himself enslaved.

He was not condemned to a kindling splitting, water drawing, chicken feeding, never-to-do-anything-when-you-want-to existence, for that had ever constituted the story of his childhood. He had long since learned to suffer those ills in silence. Now he was being aged by a wilful and unruly father.

Howard Washington Sawyer's father would not listen to argument, was not subject to logic and even now persisted in forbidding Howard Washington and his younger brother Robert McKinley the translation of the Katzenjammer Kids into real life. Only yesterday they had played a joke on mamma and she knew no better than to tumble and fall and hurt her head. Howard Washington Sawyer wished he were dead or [illegible] had never been born. It would be hard indeed to die young, so very young, and when a hiding was good at that. But he was ready to throw himself into the river [illegible] there [illegible] was [illegible] quite sure it would reform his father, turn him from his nefarious machinations against little boys and visit a just measure of retribution on the head of that most [illegible] parent.

Howard Washington had walked for some time in the shadow of a doubt as to the future of Shep. Shep was the neighbor's dog and had been [illegible] the Sawyer premises. This was only one of a multitude of their [illegible]. The [illegible] was [illegible] last winter it was [illegible]. Now Shep must be harbored no longer. Howard Washington wouldn't accept [illegible] with a [illegible] to return [illegible]. She was a [illegible] even greater [illegible] than grandmother and [illegible].

Howard Washington [illegible] all the day when he first smuggled [illegible] Shep [illegible]

tributes one had reason to expect. In [illegible] In the light of day the men's [illegible] had pulled him to such a [illegible] individual was humiliating in the extreme. The thought galled his soul.

Howard Washington's father [illegible] in the community. He was a [illegible] at the Sawyer [illegible]. Howard Washington was anxious [illegible]. He was not [illegible] the exact [illegible] the office [illegible] but he had [illegible] about it and pounced upon it [illegible] with other boys. The [illegible] had not found his father out. Howard Washington had been [illegible] in the man who since he had come to see things rightly had always exercised an arbitrary and unjust censorship over him and had proven a stumbling block on more than one occasion.

Up to this day Howard Washington

HOWARD SAWYER

Sawyer had been filled with vainglory and boasting. He had enthroned his father on a pedestal of adaptability [illegible] to which all other [illegible] was expected to bow in continued [illegible]. But his [illegible] the way of all idols. In the [illegible] of the discovery Howard Washington felt degraded. He was [illegible] discernment [illegible] endorse the [illegible] saying nothing [illegible] never spoken to [illegible]. He sifted the dust [illegible] toes as it was thrown [illegible] expected to [illegible] the problem of his future [illegible] consciously the last [illegible] that he would ever know in the [illegible] of separation. He brushed the tears from his eyes as he imagined her stealing quietly from the room. His cross gun was beneath his bed at home. It would be an easy matter to take it with him and one should be armed for a night in the woods. Before dawn he would be safely in the camp of his future friends.

The wise old jay bird saw Howard Washington turn a sorrowful grimy face furrowed with sweat and tears from the parting rays of the setting sun and flew away into the woodland to tell his frightened neighbors that it was only a little boy with a stone bruise and a sore toe who had been crying in the road but was now asleep. Here and there a multi-colored butterfly flitted in and out among the [illegible] of an old worm fence. A chipmunk scurried to a point of vantage to satisfy his curiosity in a sleeping boy.

The scene changed but the sleeper, unconscious of it all, was gently folded in the dark curtain of the night until the moon peeked in through the rustling foliage to light his dreams.

Howard Washington Sawyer was with his friends the Indians. He was leading a desperate midnight raid and the sound of his warriors' cries shivered the silence of the night and echoed in mysterious calls through the woods. Howard Washington Sawyer, the great white renegade, was scourging his enemies with a whip of flame in his dreams and the homes of all evil disposed whites were kindled with the fires of his hatred. He heard a voice. Someone had seized him by the shoulder and was shaking him. He sat up and rubbed his eyes into wakefulness. It was a man with a dinner bucket and he was evidently on his way to work. The scene had shifted. Instead of the setting sun the rising orb was lighting the eastern horizon with the flush of dawn.

Howard Washington Sawyer was stiff and sore and hungry. The man with the dinner pail was kind. He understood how a little boy might be lost for a night in the woods and he gave him a bite and direction home. The anger of Howard Washington Sawyer had passed and it seemed like a million years since he had seen his people. When he approached the house Shep was waiting for him at the gate and the tears filled the little boy's eyes as he patted the dog's head and said:

Do you know me Shep? Shep danced about joyfully and wagged his tail in welcome and recognition and Howard Washington Sawyer passed into his father's house.

NAVIGATION COMPANY ISSUES NOVELETTE

The D & C Route Illustrated in Story and Half Tones

The Detroit and Cleveland Navigation company of Detroit has issued a novelette entitled The Mystery of a Monogram. The action of the story, the plot and character are reminiscent of a midsummer outing over the D & C line and vividly bring back to tourists the beauties and allurements of numerous resorts along the route; to those who have yet to enjoy an outing in northern Michigan the novelette is an attractive guide. It is also an intensely interesting story. Every point of interest along the route is indicated [illegible] featured while panoramic views [illegible] make it readable. English [illegible] quaint and supplemented with beautiful half tones. Indeed the book is profusely illustrated and this adds greatly to its attractiveness.

The novelette which also gives rate dates of sailing [illegible] can be secured by writing A. A. Schantz, general superintendent and passenger traffic manager of the D & C company.

A MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION

Is Permanently Organized by Marion's Two Hundred Retailers.

ALL TRADE ABUSES TO BE UNITEDLY OPPOSED BY THEM

The Officers Selected Are Representative of all the Retail Trades—Constitution Is Adopted and the Trading Stamp Question Taken up With Promise of Desired Results

The Retail Merchants Association of Marion effected a permanent organization at the Y M C A auditorium Friday June [illegible]. There was a representative attendance from the 200 signers to the roll of membership and the organization started off with very satisfactory promise.

After the proper adoption of the constitution the officers of the association were suggested by a nominating committee and were unanimously elected. They are as follows: President, S G Kleinmaier; vice presidents, M J Dumble, D A Frank, T J Kevin, J C Anthony, W B DeVeny; secretary, R F Lewis; treasurer, L K Uhler; executive committee in addition to president, secretary and treasurer, D B Goodsell, J W Thew, F B Layton, L E Starr, J W Cleary, D C Nelson and C W McClun. It will be noted that the various lines of trade are represented in the official list and great efficiency is promised by the character of the officers chosen.

The first meeting did not go into the various trade nuisances that the association is expected to combat but the problem of the trading stamp was thoroughly discussed and the association unanimously voted to discourage the trading stamp practice in Marion.

The objects of the association are such that they can be fully published. The aim to eliminate trade abuses, to make war on the fakirs and fraud, to oppose impositions on tradesmen and the public, to contend unitedly against the competitors who seek to encroach upon the Marion field, to lift the standard of legitimate retail trade, to promote fraternity and social amenities among the retail merchants of Marion.

An early event will be a banquet to which it is hoped to bring all the members when all the problems of general interest to the retail merchants will be assigned for discussion. Meanwhile the association will cordially support the merchants' annual outing and the executive committee will tackle some of the pressing problems that demand early solution.

SMALL BOY SEVERELY CUT BY A LAWN-MOWER

Leaping in front of a lawn mower being pushed by Lock Clouse, a boy companion, Floyd, the ten year old son of Mr and Mrs Alfred Kinnamon, residing two miles south of Caledonia, was seriously injured Friday afternoon. One of the sharp knives of the lawn mower caught the little fellow on the left heel, severing the large tendon and inflicting injuries that may result in lock jaw.

The accident happened at the Clouse home east of Caledonia where two classes from the North Canaan Sunday school were holding an ice cream social.

The boy's screams are said to have been audible to the next farm house, a quarter of a mile away. Soon after the accident he went into spasms and it was feared that he would die. Dr. F. H. Jackson of Edison was called and dressed his wound.

Horrible Condition of Affairs Prevails in the City

SCAVENGERS OF THE CITY GUILTY OF AWFUL PRACTICE

Are Dumping the Night Soil Gathered by Them Into the Manholes of the Storm Water Sewers—Sewers Are Clogged and Stench Works Through Drains Into Cellars

Recently residents of Kenton avenue complained about a terrible stench which arose from the storm water sewer along that thoroughfare and followed the cellar drains into their homes.

An investigation was made by the authorities. It was learned that scavengers had been dumping night soil through the man holes into the sewer with the result that the sewer was too small to carry it away and the awful stench was a natural sequence.

Physicians say that the general public has little idea of the awful result that might follow such a practice. The fact that the stench carrying disease germs goes through the cellar drains into the homes of people residing in the vicinity of Kenton avenue is considered an almost certain forerunner of sickness. The scavengers who placed the night soil in the sewer will be punished to the fullest extent of the law if their identity is learned, say members of the health board.

In future the health board purposes to make every scavenger take out a yearly license, a charge of a dollar being made, and then issue permits at the rate of ten cents for each permit. The scavengers must also come up to all the requirements of the sanitary code. Unless they have a suitable place to dump the night soil a permit will not be issued.

It is stated that there are any number of farmers in the county who would be willing to receive the refuse for the payment of a small sum of money.

New York World Talks About Our Clyde Powers

The New York World of last Sunday gave an interesting account of the work Clyde Powers of this city is doing in connection with the Bostock animal show at Coney Island.

The World found Powers with the elephants in his keeping and about to perform some manicuring operations. As a result a number of photographs were taken and reproduced in its columns while the reporter gave the following detailed description of his experience as the guest of the elephant trainer, who by the way is quite well known to Marion readers. Worked his way up from the training of pigs and geese to the present responsible position he holds with one of the foremost animal men of the country.

Roger Lord the elephant was manicured the other day. That is four of him were. And the operation was one that would make the pretty manicure girl who holds your hand and says sweet nothings to you while she makes your nail look nice flee from her post of duty. For the big beasts that do their part toward making visitors to Coney Island enjoy themselves are apt to object to it and more than one faithful keeper eager to ease the elephant's lot and make him more comfortable has lost his life under similar circumstances.

At Bostock's animal headquarters Trainer Powers is the man on whom the delicate and dangerous task fell. He was fully equal to it. He knows elephants as he would know his own children and they love him and fear him. At the same time he appreciated the danger of what he had to do, for it was only a few months ago that George Lockhart, for years looked on as the foremost elephant trainer, lost his life while trying to cut a callous spot from an elephant forepaw through the big beast accidentally trampling him to death.

So that when Mr Powers knelt down before Roger, one of the biggest of the elephants, and began his work his small audience looked on in awe, to say nothing of a feeling of nervousness.

The elephants Roger, Alice, Frank and the diminutive Tom were brought out in front of the big building and at a word of command seated themselves on their haunches like the performers in a minstrel show.

[illegible] and Mr Powers and the [illegible] raised his forepaw and put it [illegible] trainer's knee. With a coarse [illegible] began to rasp away at [illegible] nails on Roger's feet. The [illegible] apparently paid no attention to [illegible] operation though the nail was be[illegible] off [illegible].

[illegible] elephant you will observe [illegible] Mr Powers as he performed [illegible] variety and [illegible] from Asia. The African animal has only four toes. These fellows require a great deal more care than the others somehow for their nails have a great tendency to split up the middle and cause a festering of the foot. Then again the nails force themselves through the flesh from either side bringing two of the toes together, which is apt to cripple the elephant for life, to say nothing of making him irritable.

As he spoke he had filed away half an inch or more of the nail and now applied a liberal quantity of oil which was rubbed in with a cloth.

It was just like this that poor Lockhart was killed, added Powers. The elephant slipped as he was completing the job of fixing his nails and crushed his trainer in anger.

The next operation was on a corn which had been bothering Roger for a long time. It was on one of his hind feet and to get at it Powers had the big chap mount a tub and thrust the offending foot out toward him. Then with a knife he scraped away at the cushion of the foot till the corn was exposed. It was the size of a silver quarter and when the knife touched it the elephant trumpeted in pain.

It hurts him, said Powers quietly, but went right on. The corn was whittled down and then dug out with a pair of tweezers and Roger really seemed relieved.

On the bottom of the foot was a huge callous mass which Powers described as the tread of the hoof.

Elephants traveling with a circus, he said, walk on dirt and gravel and keep their feet in good condition. But where they walk mostly on plank flooring a great deal of trouble arises. Their feet do not wear evenly. The planks get water soaked and it is like standing in water. That rots the foot and makes it hard for us to keep it in good shape.

While he was talking he was busy paring down the tread of the hoof until it was as smooth as a new pine floor and about the same color. It was just hard enough to be uncomfortable but not of a degree of callousness so that a piece of glass or a nail could get [illegible]. [illegible] sometimes happens [illegible] elephant [illegible] to have lockjaw.

Similar operations were performed on the other elephants and all stood it well. When they left the hands of their caretaker they trumpeted happily and [illegible] trumpeting is such an ungainly [illegible] condition [illegible].

The elephants are now in splendid condition for the show troupe [illegible] in the [illegible] forenoon and [illegible] then [illegible] rubbed with [illegible] foot [illegible].

A marriage license has been granted to Everett [illegible] and Miss [illegible] Temple.

Valuable as an Exercise For Young and Old of Both Sexes Says Dr Francis Pond—Experience of a Corpulent Woman at Skipping the Rope—Famous Prize Fighters Who Have Been Skippers

In the National Review Dr Francis Pond of London speaks in high praise of skipping the rope as an exercise for young and old of both sexes It costs nothing it can be done at home It needs no partner or opponent it helps the lungs it keeps down fat

"Not the least of its merits" writes Dr Pond "is the ease with which it can be graduated to meet the capacity of even the feeblest tyro Skipping is essentially a rhythmical exercise It is this essentially rhythmical feature of skipping which enables it to be graduated so precisely The skipper who adjusts his movements to a definite rate per minute may be assured that in ten minutes he is expending just ten times the energy that he expends in one minute

"Although skipping like all other movements which call the muscular system generally into play exercises a distinctly beneficial influence on the muscles which it most uses it is to its effect on the heart that we must look for the criterion of its value from a physiological point of view for the heart is the muscle which above all others needs to be trained for sustained physical effort of any kind Whatever tends to strengthen the heart promotes the circulation and aeration of the blood through the lungs the increase of the secretions and of the general tone of vitality throughout the whole body

"There is also another consideration which the adult who embarks on skipping must keep in view and that is the possible existence of mischief in the lungs or in some other part of the body which may be intensified by too sudden an increase in the circulation of the blood If the mischief is known to exist it will be easy to test the effect of skipping upon it by careful observation of graduated employment of the exercise

"The deposit of fat in different parts of the body though primarily a physiological process and one which has its unquestionable uses in the animal economy easily passes into a condition in which it becomes a disease In this condition it is due to one of two causes or in some cases to a combination of both over eating or drinking or want of the exercise which can alone balance such indulgence A lady writer who speaks with no mean authority on all that relates to female hygiene says in speaking of skipping that for keeping corpulence at bay there is nothing to equal it and relates the experience of a poor but unhappy lady of her acquaintance who being threatened with embonpoint adopted the advice of a candid friend and took to skipping as her daily exercise Living in a neighborhood where the barrel organ nuisance is rampant she is proof of the saying that it is an ill wind that blows nobody any good for she so manages her work that as soon as the daily organ reaches her end of the street she can take her skipping rope into her paved back yard and skip in regular measure to its rhythmic if noisy music She is now slim and upright as a dart bright of face and ready for anything

In such a case as this the effect of the increase of the circulation produced by skipping is to remove the superfluous and practically dead tissue (fat) in which the disease of obesity consists by the augmented nutrition which it sets up But the victims of this unhappy malady will delude themselves if they imagine that they can easily rid themselves of the incumbrance of their too too solid flesh by the aid of skipping alone or of any other therapeutic agency however much it may be wanted for the purpose without at the same time tackling the evil at the other end by cutting off the excess of food which is the prime cause of it
